Goshen College . . .

An almost seventy-five year old culture which has cultivated, fermented and inoculated our realities.

A continuum. Somewhat analogous to the seasoned regularity of green trees, patchwork trees and bare trees,
we grew by architectural necessities upon architectural necessities and vociferous generations.

With trust in and respect for this continuum
the Harold Goods shook hands with the future and gave a library and green trees . . .

In our draft card burning, God-burying, Pepsi generation we became involved in understanding.
 Our pragmatic optimisms and pessimisms diffused into question and answer relationships, sometimes resolved in moments of withdrawal.
 We critically reviewed.
 We close-reserved.
 We underlined—outlined—red-lined.
 Note cards, briefcases, Moody's Blue Book, slide rules, wire book racks, Reader's Guide.
 Probabilities, realities and eventualities.
 The will to learn. The will to contemplate.
 Concentration Frustration.
 Enlightenment.

To follow the day-to-day demands of the academically oriented life,
we aligned ourselves.
Sometimes we followed the vertical rigidity of impressive schedules or we slept in.
We challenged
the law of diminishing returns.
English Novel, Micro-technique,
Bach and Briggs, the whys of Viet Nam.
We followed chimes to Ed Stoltzfus,
Father Riga, John Oyer, supervising teachers and head nurses.
Demands. Seek and find instincts.

Our curiosities led us into as many directions
as the sidewalks took, our imaginations soared and the earth squared.
To some of us United States was not sky-scrapped urbanity and to others Africa proved more than the tantalizing beats of far away drums.
We as international students learned about American punctuality, baseball, black bread, 58¢ living, spring vacationing on a Honda.
We had to recite Chopin and play Sandburg.
We had to think about wind and rain in our hair,
textured hose, impressionism, and guitars.
Our eyes heard no limits.
A ricochet into experience.

Rev. Samuel Banks, University of Florida

Jettied and bussed to our campus, sponsored speakers planted ideas as varied as their degrees. War on poverty.
Swiss accent. The world of Dante. Re-exposure to Peanuts. Chapel singings. They spelled out and helped our prejudices swing to discovery. We re-examined and our pacifism no longer seemed so exclusively our own, nor our conflicts so discouraging. Their generated discussion filtered through our snackshop and sidewalks and became as much a GC tradition as briefcases and guitars.

Rev. Louis J. Putz, Notre Dame

The line fed into lines which flowed into lines
 in which we waited for copies of Social Contract and became a number 65-132 in the line.
 Lines begat numbers which begat lines . . .
 Registration lines, lunch lines,
 chapel lines, graduation lines . . .
 Vertically, horizontally and diagonally
 the lines intersected and severed each other and intermingled they led to teaching positions, grad school, Peace Corps and Pax.
 Because of their vague and ill-defined implications
 we delighted in the present lines.

We played "The Importance of Being Earnest, a Trivial Comedy
for Serious People."

Wild Wilde.

England a la Goshen.

Tea and crumpets.

"Girls never marry the men they flirt with."

We one-act-played from the theatre of the absurd—"The Bald Soprano,"

"The Room" and "The Chairs."

They came and were not.

Eloquent waxes orator.

Strained alphabet.

And in a final flourish we played with unbelievable satiric mockery,

"The Beggar's Opera."

1965-66

We dressed up, arranged dates and bought two general A tickets in preparation for an evening of two hard seats,
 ubiquitous tick birds and Concordia Choir.
 When De Carvalho turned from Tschaikowsky Fourth to receive our applause
 LM formality was genuine.
 And interspersed with the vacuum brought on by film frustration came the penetration of Frankl and logotherapy, Josef Korbel and Communist East Europe.
 The enchanting variety of Homecoming's of Robert Shaw's April Messiah capstoning

 another series of cultural maturation.

Wedged between the residential bounds of a small city and the high power lines of the open field, fringed existence augmented our own interest in Goshen and Washington. We were exposed to Huntley-Brinkley and New York Times, wrangled in Peace Society Committee Meetings and issued private bulls in Kratz sessions. As we caught ourselves in the expressions of Selma, Washington and Good Friday Tornadoes, involvement became a sequel to interest.

We were caught in the Great Society of Washington, Watts and Wayne County and the escalated confusions of Saigons and Selmas.

The bold formats of Newsweek, Look,
the printed pages of Christian Century . . .
collecting mental images amassed until we responded.

Weekends at Englewood. Vocational shuffling.
Leap. Discipleship.

Saigon via Atlee Beechy. Peru and Goshen College implications. Viet Nam fasts.
Ingrained Christian perspectives, a GC
selvage and an internationality molded the subjective into an objective.

If intellectual competition was as strenuously fought as the battle to a position of vantage before Browns vs. Green Bay and Bullwinkle, the lauded Corruptors would play in vain.

For we welcomed escape
in the form of snowball warfare followed by peace feelers over coffee
and pizza in dorm rooms,
in Saturday shopping sprees to South Bend, in 6:00 AM ice skating parties and midnight poker.

Stiff legs and 3:30 yawns followed us
to our calendered persuals.

Sometimes together alone
or alone together
or just alone
caught somewhere
between friends and ties with home,
we relied on Charlie Schultz' discoveries,
roommates of the philosopher species,
profs with open door and ear policy
and walks to the dam.
Directive thrusts in understanding.
In the coolness of the Spouter Inn
to "Be Thou My Vision" in chapel, raucous groupings in dorms,
coupled isolation,
thoughtful aloneness,
we discovered ourselves in each other.

Polarized socializations congregated around light poles and mail boxes and Kulp steps.

Separation as far apart
 as the word "co-ed" itself.

Designated weekends
 evoked calendared responses.

Spring Fest—a major social tension—endured by some,
 anticipated by a minority and ostracized by most.

In actuality self-structured weekends—
 Romeo and Juliet at Notre Dame, stacks of Brubeck, Streisand, cookies—held preference over "campus climaxes."

Yet, it's often

a lonely world.

ORGANIZATIONS

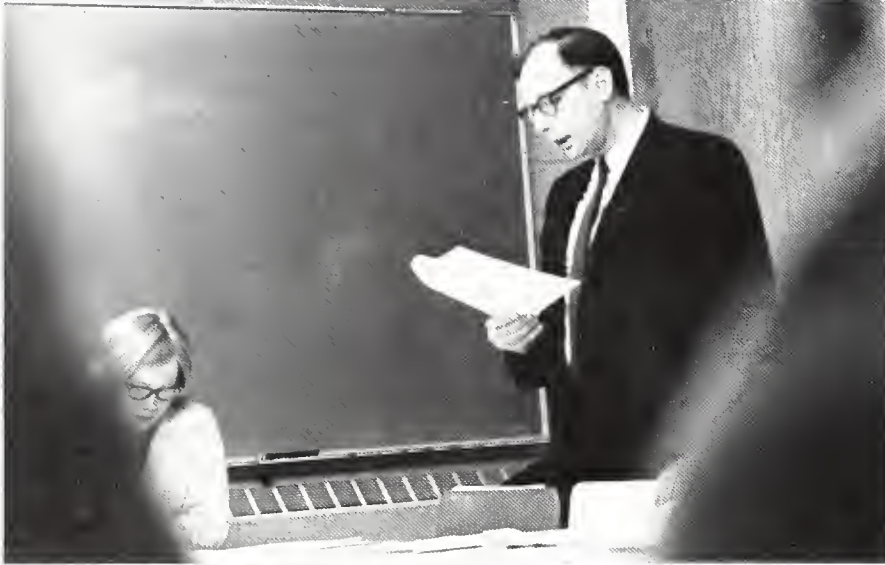

On a campus with community variance evidenced by Iowa intellectuals, Hoosier basketball players, west-coast nature enthusiasts, the ever-popular guitarist, and other packets of group interest, organized participation took a prominent place in the year's student life.

Supplementary, yet pleasantly divorced from lectures and labs, outside activities added to the educated whale as well as to general enjoyment.

As the 7:00 a.m. A Cappella went through Greig "just one more time," as Act I—Beggar's Opera polished its line, as sweat-shirted baseball players jogged to a late supper, or students grabbed a minute from a busy day to lend an ear to the Carrupters or maybe some Chicago blues, the various extra-curricular groups melted into an integral whole. The loose ends of many fringe areas were drawn together into the firm social structure that made campus interaction possible.

A Developing Organism

The controversial Celebrity Series Bill was often amended by Senator Al Albrecht at the bi-weekly Senate meetings.

Cultural Commission. John Fisher Jr., Sue King, Ila Hartzler, Rod Hernley, Chairman.

The Goshen College Community Government began its second year as the branch of college organization which encouraged student responsibility in community life, co-ordinated student activities, and provided opportunities for communication and co-operation among students and faculty.

Leading the GCCG this year were seniors Wally Gingerich, President; faculty member Al Albrecht, Vice-president; and junior Gwen Brenneman, Secretary. Changes in representation included two new senators, John Hackmon representing the Seminary and Adrien Powell representing the freshman class.

Early business sessions were taken up with routine budget materials and finalizing such sponsored activities as the film series.

Bills which were of outstanding interest in this year's session of GCCG included the passing of the Special Series Bill sponsored by Al Albrecht. This Bill which was recommended for further faculty action was an attempt to bring lighter entertainment to the campus. Ben Showalter, senior Senator, sponsored an extended Weekend Library Hour Bill which opened the library on Sunday afternoons on an experimental basis.

Questions and Transitions

Between collecting pledges, SCA Treasurer Roger Beachy snatches a glimpse of CREEDS IN THE MAKING.

Seen from the perspective of Thursday morning chapels, weekends at Engelwood, and evenings at the Lighthouse, the SCA operated with an emphasis on "faith in action." Aiming to help each participant enrich his Christian experience, the SCA provided a wide spectrum of activities.

Characterized by involvement, the Campus Commission spread out into Goshen as well as Chicago. For a carload of members, Englewood Mennonite Church in inner Chicago was an invigorating weekend crammed with club meetings, crafts, and tutoring. Working in close co-operation with the Lighthouse program, SCA members also tutored Goshen area children in reading and writing skills.

Membership in Koinonia groups was also encouraged. Through these groups interested persons were given opportunities to share concerns and broaden their spiritual pilgrimages.

Under the sponsorship of the SCA, the Intercollegiate Christian Council met on campus in November. Schools sending delegates were Eastern Mennonite, Hesston, Conrad Grebel, and Bluffton. To more meaningfully examine the issue "The Church on the Christian Campus—Present and Future," each school presented a paper which discussed the church on its campus and analyzed the emerging patterns of formal worship.

A session of the Inter-Y Conference was devoted to an evaluation of Conrad Grebel's report of their campus church.

Ordered Vorticism

With the election of mathematics major Neal Staltzfus as Maple Leaf editor in the spring of the 1964-65 school year, affairs began to take a logical order. Session after session, Gashen College in its entirety—students, faculty, goals and spirit—was analyzed and discussed, each session coming closer to the truth, but further away from objectivity. Staff members set up mental goals—goals which were reached in the frantic desperation of that last hour.

The major issue tended to revolve on that great American yearbook goal—a theme. Reflecting image, changing image, ad infinitum. In the process a distinct pattern emerged. Ideas began to march single file in a singularity of thought; Gashen College was a unique entity and as such it must be portrayed. A patternal framework then developed as staffers watched people and ideas on the move.

As each deadline was met, the May distribution date became a reality. Each deadline meant all night darkroom sessions, endless rewrites, and frankly frustrating mistakes. And as September idealism was translated into February realism, another Maple Leaf was published.

"Good News Week"

During the summer months Record equipment was spirited from the sacred journalistic suite of the Administration building across the tracks to the former rat labs in the maintenance building. During the first few weeks of school, editor Carinne Rahrer expanded the nucleus staff, set up the office, and whipped out a "welcoming" issue.

Last year's interpretive approach was scuttled in favor of straight news and editorials. Two new regulars were added. The international relations column, written by international students and Record staff members who recently returned from Junior Year Abroad programs, analyzed and discussed political, social and economic dimensions of foreign affairs, while senior Rebecca Kreider captured campus discussion in a mad, mad, issue-to-issue free verse column entitled "Becca."

With the across-the-tracks views translated into a four to eight page spread, the Tuesday noon deadline met, and last galley sheets corrected, each issue was born. When a copy was pulled out of the mailbox, every student read himself. For Record was student commentary from the boldly predictive "Sports Racket" to the five line fillers.

In Excelsis Deo

The sixty-three voice A Cappella Choir, shaped by director Dwight Weldy, experienced a busy and varied year. The group was prepared to perform weighty works such as the Mozart Mass in C Major in addition to pieces catering to audience appeal such as Shutz and Eccard double chair numbers. Other pieces included in the repertoire were sixteenth and seventeenth century works by Tallis, Handel, and Gallus. Spring vacation highlighted a year of disciplined practices with an eleven day tour to Iowa, Illinois, and Minnesota.

In addition to the A Cappella Choir, Dr. Weldy also directed the thirty-eight member Collegiate Choir. Their itinerary included programs within the local vicinity and a spring week-end trip. The choir, composed of freshmen and sophomores, sang late Renaissance and contemporary works and also worked with hymns in an attempt to aid congregational singing.

Aesthetic Appreciation

The Goshen College Orchestra, augmented by some talented Goshen high school students, contributed to the continuing reputation of fine music on campus. A successful fall concert was highlighted by the sweet tones of Rick Smucker's trumpet and the more traditional sounds of Bach.

The spring session of orchestra was dominated by rehearsals for The Beggar's Opera and preparations for the Concerto-Aria program. Winners of the contest were senior Glenn Harder, who sang a selection from Wagner's Tannhauser, Helen Delp, who sang a piece by Gluck; Faye Moseman, playing a Bach piano Concerto in D. minor; and Leta Schrack, who performed a Mozart piano concerto in D. minor.

The Chamber Choir was a group of thirty-three members, composed mainly of music majors, which sang under the direction of David Falk. Throughout the year the Chamber Choir gave performances on campus that included both sacred and secular works from the Late Renaissance, Baroque, Romantic, and Contemporary periods of music. Performances were a cappella or accompanied by a small chamber orchestra and gave opportunity for soloists and vocal ensembles.

Tuesday and Thursday afternoon orchestra rehearsals provide a melodic release to study tensions.

Lillian Knox demonstrates a well-developed embouchure necessary to produce a mellow tone.

The words "emphasis on dialogue" printed on its introductory brochure identified the Peace Society. By entering into dialogue with persons of widely varied points of view, the Peace Society attempted to achieve an understanding of the contemporary political and moral issues and to respond as intelligent informed Christians.

During the annual Peace Emphasis Week, October 13 to 15, the Peace Society invited three persons of the Catholic, Lutheran, and Anabaptist traditions to share in dialogue and exchange their views, concerning the Christian attitude toward war.

Headed by senior John Klassen, the society was also interested in understanding the positions of the various political groups in regard to the problem of U.S. foreign policy and world peace. At one of the monthly meetings, the local chapter of the John Birch Society was represented.

Several members attended the Inter-collegiate Peace Conference held at Bethel College in North Newton, Kansas in April. The theme under discussion was "U.S. Policy Toward Communist China." The society also encouraged participation in the annual Peace Oratorical Contests and the reading of materials found in the Peace Library.

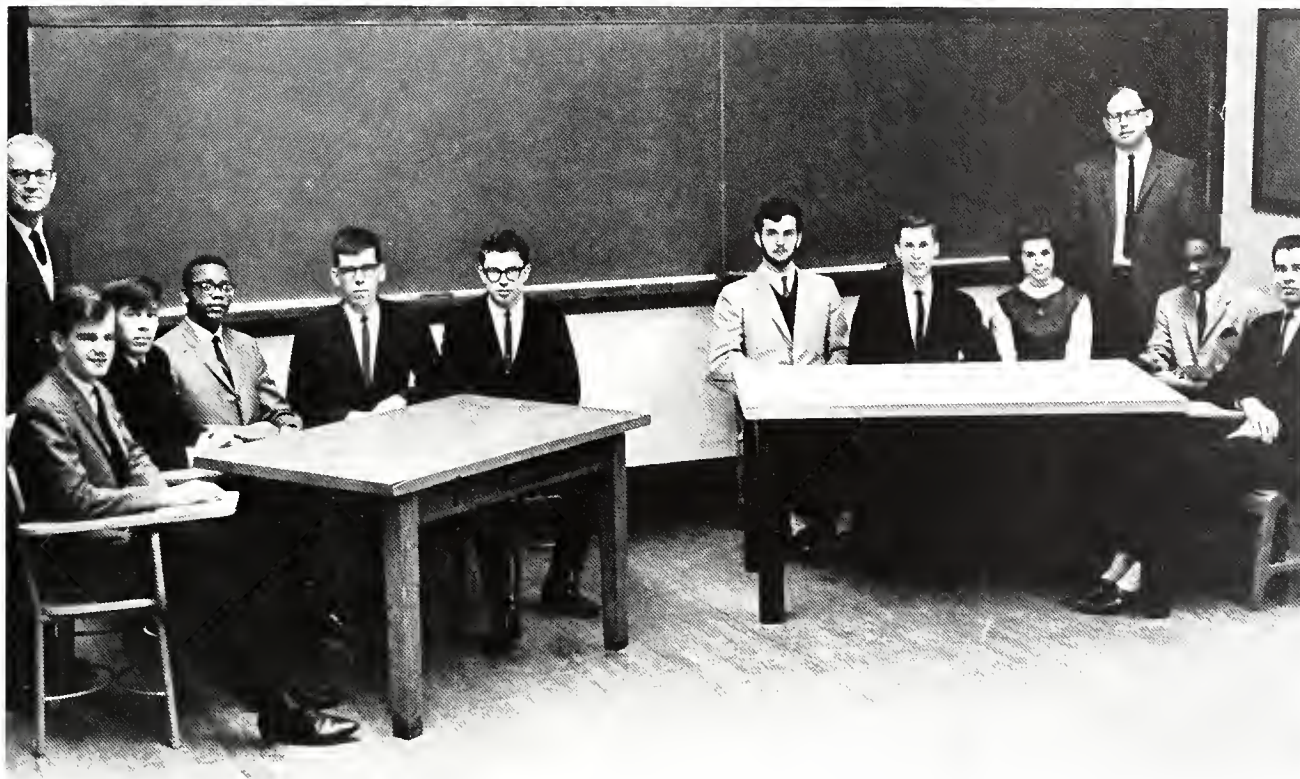

Reacting to audience response, Mr. Kreuger of the local John Birch Society defends the right wing position on disarmament.

Focus on Dialog

Adrian Powell and his debate partner plan strategy to offset their opponents at the all day Maple Leaf Tournament in November.

"Resolved that law enforcement agencies of the United States should be given greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime," was the debate question which occupied the minds of the 1965-66 Debate Club. With this question as the basis of the year's work, the club attempted to facilitate the skills of thinking under pressure, organizing materials, articulation, and the use and evaluation of evidence in order to come up with a winning team.

For the second consecutive year, Goshen College hosted the Maple Leaf Tournament. Eight teams participated in two divisions, varsity and novice, bringing seventy debaters and their coaches to Goshen College, where the Maple Leaf varsity team came out strong with a three-to-one victory-loss record for the tournament.

Cooch Al Albrecht and Manager Leo Kreider accompanied the team to tournaments throughout various states—from Iowa to Ohio. Open debate with universities like Northwestern added spice, and the teams had little opportunity for inactivity with forty invitations throughout the school year.

Application of Theory

Creative Tension

Twenty-one members, a flair for production, and a well developed interest in the modern stage characterized the Drama Club. Sponsored by Dr. Umble and headed by Mary Schoffer, the club presented plays and organized listings of off-campus productions, in addition to securing tickets for these events.

With a special interest in modern religious drama, the club, backed by the Cultural Commission of the Community Government, presented plays in nearby churches. Circle Beyond Fear was presented in an October SCA chapel. The cost of Christ in the Concrete City toured churches in the Colorado area during Spring break.

The major thrust, however, occurred in the production of plays. Members participated in the Speech Department's first semester presentation of Oscar Wilde's comedy, The Importance of Being Earnest. Second semester featured three one-act plays in the absurdist tradition: The Bald Soprano and The Chairs by Eugene Ionesco and The Room by Harold Pinter.

The reading of the play No Exit supplements refreshments at a Drama Club meeting.

Student director Evie Yoder gives helpful suggestions to Cecily and Gwendolyn in the scene of "deception uncovered."

Recorded Abstractions

Foolscap was the campus literary publication of creative expression. Sponsored by the English Department and edited by Becca Kreider, the '66 issue was a compilation of art work; individual expressions of sculpture, paintings, photography, poetry, prose, and short stories were included. Both students and faculty contributed works.

An annual publication, the Foolscap appeared in May. Other staff members were Bonnie Weldy, assistant editor; Guenn Martin, poetry editor; Dan Ramsby, short story editor; Paul Graber, art editor; and Barb Aeschliman, layout editor.

WGCS. Faye Mosemann, Music Director; Ken Eigsti, Student Engineering Co-ordinator; Charlie Kauffman, Student Program Director.

WGCS Goes AM

Included in Steve Eigsti's job as AM Engineer is a thorough recheck of the intricate controls.

For the first time since it began operating, WGCS announced itself as 91.1 AM and FM. In its after-hours operating schedule, the AM station tried to provide a variation on the classical programming of day-time broadcasting. From jazz to Broadway show tunes, rock to folk music, announcers such as "Big Daddy De—the golden throated one" kept the 10:00 to 12:00 hours lively.

The FM broadcasts continued to provide the campus and the Goshen area with a fine arts and educational radio station. Two female voices joined the staff of approximately twenty-five broadcasters and engineers in transmitting the wide coverage of classical music, basketball games, news, chapels, Sunday church services, speech contests, and other special events on the campus and in the community. Broadcasting took place under the supervision of Charles Kauffman, Program Director; Ken Eigsti, Engineering Co-ordinator; and Faye Mosemann, Music Director.

Cultural Transfusion

The International Relations Club met to promote mutual understanding and to encourage social, intellectual, and spiritual interchange among students of all nationalities at Goshen College. Throughout the year members of the club presented programs, skits, and cultural displays of their various countries. In April the club was host to eight other Mennonite Colleges for the International Students Conference which was centered around the theme, "The Student in World Revolution in Terms of Prospect and Retrospect."

This year the German Club was formed from an independent group of students, faculty members, and alumni who were interested in speaking German and learning to know the people and the culture.

An evening imitating the classic October Fest turned into an evening of nostalgia, ballad singing, cider drinking, and folk dancing. Seminary student and German instructor Harst Heidebrecht gave the Andacht in the Erntedankfestheld in the Seminary Chapel in November. The group also listened to Alban Berg's Wozzeck.

Technology Applied

Ken Eigsti tunes the WA9NJU receiver to talk to another "ham" in Illinois.

By landing a red and white Champion—N9859B—on the college lawn and taking applications for membership under its wings, the Aero Club made good use of its equipment for publicity purposes in recruiting new members. Thirteen perspective pilots were added to the club's role. Leading the club were John Bender, President; Jerry Troester, Vice-President; Cliff Hochstedler, Secretary-treasurer; and Howard Birky and Ardell Swortzendruber, members of the board of directors. The club provided access to the plane to members who were licensed pilots and offered flying instruction to those interested in obtaining a solo license.

Eight licensed operators frequented the "ham" headquarters in the south part of the Union Building. Other club members seeking federal licenses practiced on a code machine and learned theory from licensed members. Galen Wenger, President; Steve Eigsti, Vice-President; and Lowell Guengerich, Secretary-Treasurer directed the activities of the club.

A series of monthly meetings helped home economics majors keep in touch with current topics in the field. While experiencing a Moravian Christmas, listening to an extension supervisor from Purdue University, seeing Mrs. Ingold's slides of home economics opportunities in Nigeria, the club members developed a better understanding of home and family living and gained a broader view of opportunities for the trained home economist.

This summer two of the members attended the National Home Economics Association meeting in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Marie Hershberger related to the club some of the ideas she received from the convention and its theme, "Mobilizing Our Potential." Susan Michael was editor of "News and Views," the state newspaper.

Another extra-curricular outburst of Division Four was the Science Club. With an aim to present science to the college and community, the club collaborated with the Cultural Commission of the Community Government and presented an early November open house. Reports on current research were presented to members at monthly meetings. The club president was John Bender.

Vocational Groundwork Laid

The skills of gift wrapping are demonstrated at the annual Christmas meeting of the Student Wives Club.

Christopher Dack members profit from Mrs. Carl Kreider's talk on the Laubach method of combatting illiteracy in the Gashen area.

Cindy Jantzi and Diane Alderfer appear quite unimpressed as the treasurer's report is given.

The motivating purpose behind NSA was to broaden student interest in nursing and make available information not acquired in the hospital. Topics such as nursing in mission fields, job opportunities for graduates, and rehabilitation of the emotionally disturbed delinquent highlighted the club meetings and discussions.

Headed by Marvene Pippenger, the Student Wives Fellowship met monthly in various faculty and staff homes. Their programs centered on topics pertinent to the dual lives the members live as both students and homemakers. They had demonstrations of gift wrapping, quick cooking, and other helpful tips and enjoyed the fellowship of just getting together to talk, share, and discuss.

Christopher Dock Club, a segment of the state and National Education Association, introduced teacher education students to some of the professional problems of teaching. Speakers such as Mrs. Carl Kreider and Judge Obermiller of Whiting, Indiana spoke to the club on the varied subjects of Laubach's treatment of literacy problems and "Youth and Morals." The club also initiated an exchange program with Bethel College and attended the Indiana State Education Convention in Indianapolis on March 26.

The Women's House Government Association, under the leadership of President Jan Nase, attempted to co-ordinate dorm living and aid in the improvement of campus social life. The organization this year consisted of the head residents, the four organizational officers, dorms chairmen, and representatives from Shoup, Kenwood, and Howell Houses.

Working with personnel officers, WHGA helped regulate off-campus housing necessitated by enrollment expansion. Determining late leave policies, organizing Sunday noon coffee hours, and arranging dorm breakfasts were a few of its other functions.

To assist freshmen in their adjustments to dorm living, WHGA published a handbook of policies and regulations and provided upper-classmen counselors. The organization also sponsored several open house occasions for the Women's Residence Halls.

On March 4, WHGA presented a variety program to compliment the male students on their good housekeeping displayed at their annual open house.

As the college expanded, the interest in intramural and extramural sports programs became a more integral part of campus activity. Student interest in the soccer team, varsity basketball and various minor sport tournaments evidenced this growing interest.

Leading the student interest in athletics were the boys' G Council and the girls' Women's Athletic Association, under the sponsorship of John Ingold and Ruth Gunden.

The G Council promoted socialization, fellowship, and acted as an advisory to Men's Intramurols. They also had an awards banquet and elected the cheerleaders.

The WAA awarded prizes for intramural activities for women, provided leadership in women's athletics and sponsored activities which related to the sports interests of the college community.

The only serious problem Coach Byran Shenk encountered with the soccer team was the lack of competition. The Leafs, resalving to achieve their first winning season, started strang and finished with a flourish racking up six straight shut-outs and the season's finale over arch-rival Notre Dame.

Fleet-footed wing Dave Martin led an explosive fast-breaking front line which averaged $5\frac{1}{2}$ goals a contest, while the near perfect defense, built around seniors Paul Myers and Mark Zimmerman, with glue-fingered Duane Beck at goalie, permitted only $\frac{1}{2}$ goal a game. This combination complemented itself and produced Goshen's first perfect soccer season.

Charging the Cederville goal, Dave Mullet crosses the ball to Lynn Smith in front of the goal.

Galen Yader caps another fast break with a blast into the Notre Dame goalie's face. These encounters occur frequently as Goshen wins 4-1.

Coach Roman Gingerich directed the '65 tennis squad to a 6-2 record. The two defeats came at the hands of Taylor and the Leafs hold the distinction of being the only Indiana team who managed to score against them. Led by the unblemished singles record of Fred Hostetler, the nine man squad was reinforced by the game-to-game improvement of freshmen Gary Frey and Jerry Rogers. Rager Beachy and Jon Hartzler added senior experience to the winning team.

The cause of asceticism was bolstered by the introduction of a new varsity sport—cross country. The squad participated in two meets, taking a close third in a meet with Concord and Grace and coming back to beat Grace 25-30 in a dual meet. Larry Rupp was the top individual in the dual.

*Practice

A variety show perhaps? Or freshman-sophomore intramural football? Even the disinterested official had cause to wonder.

Upperclassmen dominated fall intramurals, capturing five of the six league championships. In softball, senior Jim Gehmon hurled his team to a 6-1 record in A competition, while Soph I troiled at 4-3. In B competition Soph II led with a 5-1 mork.

Intramural football, the pod-less flog variety, followed with its blood, toil, sweat and fun. Senior I used a big hard-charging line and a good passing attack to go undefeated, although Junior I suffered only a narrow defeat to the champions. Junior II dominated the B league with a 3-0 record.

The Juniors demonstrated their mastery in soccer by sweeping both A and B leagues without a loss. Junior I clinched the championship with a narrow 2-1 victory over the seniors. Played in soaking rain and late fall twilight, the contest was anti-climatic if not downright ridiculous.

Upperclass Domination

Jim Gehman bears down hard as he nears his record—17 strikeouts in 7 innings.

A learned member of the faculty softball team ponders the inevitable question—riser or drop ball?

Greenwich Village or Goshen College? Only the sweatshirt shows for sure.

Hardly the Weaker Sex

The senior women followed their mole counterparts by sweeping through softball with an unblemished 6-0 record. The battery of Liz Hunsberger and Bette Derstine proved invincible, and the juniors and frosh were forced to settle for a 3-3 second-place tie. Class rivalries were forgotten as the Leaflets combined to take a 9-8 cliff-hanger from Calvin in their lone extromural contest.

The Leaflets gave Calvin a chance for revenge with a return engagement in field hockey, but Goshen again triumphed 3-0. This two-game win streak was spoiled with a 3-2 loss to Hope College.

In keeping with the '65 tradition of protest movements, the ladies come up with Powder Puff football as a means of proving equality. Block-busting fullback Liz Koufmann ran the necessary yardage to carry her team to victory.

The line-backers red dog and the defensive ends blitz while the cornerbacks drop back on girl-to-girl coverage.

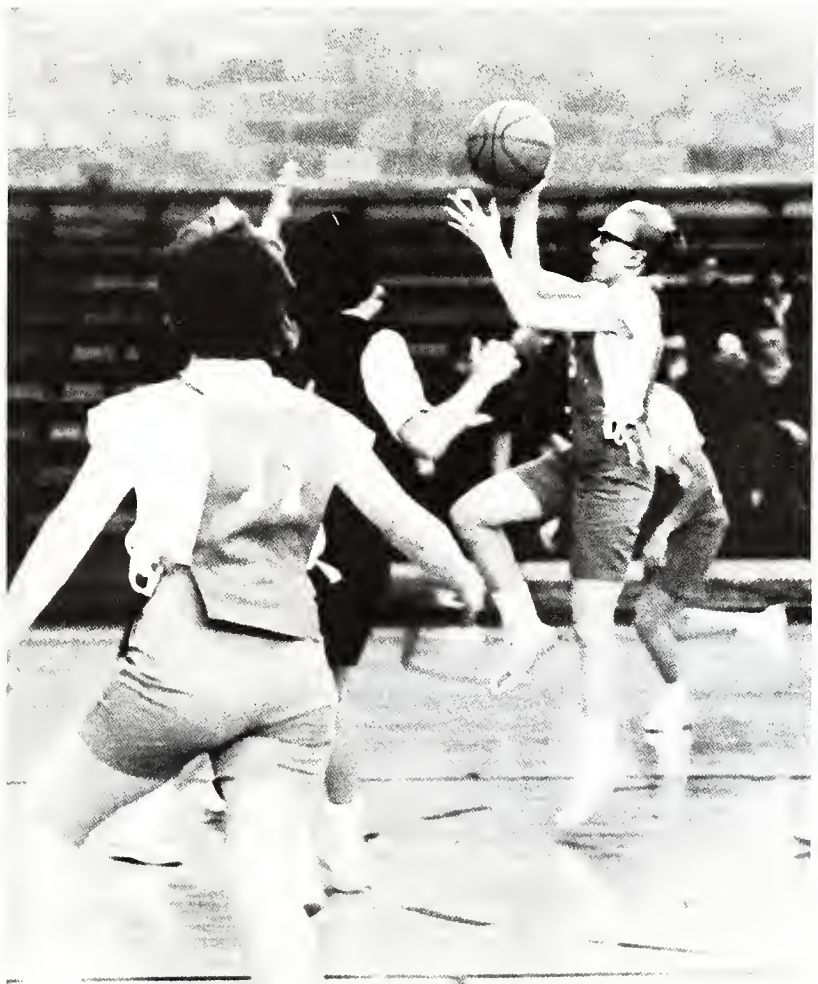

Help! A hapless Taylor player is trapped in the collapsing Goshen defense.

A winning girl's basketball team is as traditional at GC as a losing soccer team. This year the soccer team went undefeated, so the Leaflets responded by humiliating their opposition, outscoring seven hapless opponents by an average of 22 points. Senior Evie Yoder proved an inspirational floor leader defensively and offensively, scoring a season's high of 34 points against Taylor. Sharan Miller provided height in the front line and sank two crucial free throws to send the game at Calvin into overtime. The women clinched their perfect season by defeating Valparaiso at home on Feb. 26.

Evie Yoder displays her Causy-style running set shot, adding two more to her 34 points that day.

They all came. The authoritative know-it-all, the leather-lunged loudmouth, the cynic, the disinterested and most dominant of all, the Haasier baska-maniac. With a JV slaughter as an appetizer, the loyal local crowd lifted the Leafs to a 5-1 home court record. Spirit was swayed by many factors—a peppy naise band, cheerleaders (elected ond self-appointed,) and the boys in the back row, who used everything from kilts to curses in their never ending bottle with conformity and the referees.

Increasing its live coverage of the games, WGCS broadcasted two away games via long distance phone lines. Also initiated this year was a "G Keg" tradition. Grace College propased the idea and produced the keg. Gashen responded by winning and flaunting the masterpiece in the Union, where it remains until the rivalry is renewed next year.

Gradual Development

The past basketball season started off like a typical mediocre year—a couple easy victories, a heart-breaking loss to Taylar and a disappointing four game slump.

Somehow Coach Gingerich found that secret catalyst necessary to jell his players into a smooth functioning unit. The result was a seven game winning streak, including wins over Grace in the G game and Tobor and Hesston in a Kansas trip.

The team displayed extraordinary balance and bench strength but Jim Gingerich stood out. Averaging almost 19 points a game, the big forward broke the 1000-point career mark, while hitting 60% of his shots. Art Mullet was second in scoring (16.9), including a 33 point burst against Tobar, while Fred Hostetler led the team in rebounds.

The JV squad made a promising 13–2 showing, continuing their winning ways, even after losing freshman Keith Springer to the varsity. The junior Leafs combined a press, sharp shooting, and a strong running game in piling up 98 points a game.

Coach Gingerich shows signs of the mid-season slump and the Leafs' usual two-inch height disadvantage.

Byron Shenk's gymnasts staged their annual exhibition in March. Although lacking equipment, the team used Mike Shantz's flexibility and Glen Amstutz's fearlessness to give the crowd a display of discipline, strength and coordination. The coach's willingness to work with anyone inspired the participants, who practiced persistently—for fun as well as keeping in shape.

Another popular method of toning up was men's intramural basketball, where the freshman class alone fielded eight teams. In A league action, Junior I parlayed their height advantage to an undefeated A league season while Senior I took second place honors. B league competition saw Frosh III and Soph III battling to a standoff, while in C league play no less than three teams tied for the top spot.

Highlighting the Specialist

Larry Mann exhibits the perfect follow through as he hooks another ringer.

When frustrated by the anonymity of large classes, crowds, long lines or even intramural teams, the average student often finds relief by participating in one of the many annual individual tournaments. In a year when all but one of last year's winners returned, the chances for victory were slim but the principle was there nevertheless.

In '65-66 action, three-time champ Jim Gingerich won his specialty, free throw shooting, but with a sub-par 47 out of 50. Larry Mann also repeated as horseshoe's champion besting Jerry Sieber in the finals. Wendell Beck proved to be the best of the shuffleboard shovers, while Sam Snyder defended his way to the finals of the ping-pong tourney, where he returned enough of Dave Shenk's slams to win. In handball and badminton, returning champs Roger Beachy and Jon Lind nervously sharpened their game in anticipation of strong competition in their specialty.

In the women's individual events, the ping-pong and shuffleboard tournaments were wide open, with no returning victors. Senior Evie Yoder and sophomore Lois Shetler were given better than even odds to again dominate badminton and tennis.

Spring Variations

Serving forcefully, Sue King oces her opponent on match point.

It is in the spring that the variety of the intramural and extramural programs are most impressively displayed. One finds the trackmen putting in endless quarter miles to work themselves into shape. Byron Shenk coached the team which was strengthened this year by the return of record-holder Lynn Smith (half-mile) and the addition of Art Mullet. The golf team, with the top five returning, was a cinch to improve on its previous 2-6 record, with Don Graber and Dave Mullet showing the way.

The baseball team also took advantage of a nearly intact squad. Coach Ingold expertly maneuvered his players to compensate for the loss of Art Mullet, now under contract with the Pirates. Intramural men also took up baseball with Senior I battling to repeat its win over Junior I.

The women made the spring sports scene with an invitational track and several extramural tennis matches, in addition to intramural volleyball.

Wendell Beck poked a single to left in intramural baseball action.

Mullet to Gingerich—another Sportan picked off first.

Verlin Nafziger squeezes a twisting pop fly for the final out.

INQUIRY

In the learn-teach dichotomy of their profession, faculty members contribute to the college community with diversity of thought and unity of purpose. To fulfill the needs of the liberal arts student, they project the biases of their discipline, while maintaining an open ear for the changing tides of academic interpretations.

Constant interaction takes place in the openness of this liberal arts orientation. Professors of history, theology and music contribute to the understanding of Dante in Composition and World Lit classes, a biologist relates Christianity to evolutionary thought, and an English prof sings in Schutz's Weihnachthistorie.

Although academic interaction takes place in the liberal arts orientation, academic integrity exists in specialization. In a Shakespeare drama class, a bacteriology lab, and advanced music theory drills, the challenge of mastery begins.

The classroom exchange leads to new relationships in student assistantships, snackshop discussions, and coffee klotsches in faculty homes. Learning is actualized in sharing.

The administration kept the machinery moving. Because the machinery involved people, the job required a sensitive ear to all who were affiliated with the college, including building contractors and constituent pastors.

In this role Russel Liechty acted as Dean of Men and Associate Dean of Students in preparation for becoming Dean of Students in the fall of '66. At the February departure of Dean Beechy for relief service in Vietnam, Dr. Liechty became acting Dean of Students.

Administration

As Director of College Relations, J. Robert Kreider attempted to build and maintain healthy relationships between the college and the community. Organizing the fund drive for Goshen's future development, he arranged meetings with community leaders, worked closely with the President's Advisory Board, and publicized the college in home-town newspapers, alumni newsletters, and church publications such as "Gospel Herald" and "Mennonite Weekly Review."

On sabbatical leave last year, Viola Good served as consultant in the area of student affairs at International Christian University, Tokyo, Japan, and Ewha University, Seoul, Korea. A former Dean of Women, this year Miss Good acted as International Student Advisor and Coordinator of Placement Services.

During the year, Admissions Counselors, John Zook and Leland Weldy, visited 300 high schools in the East and Midwest, talking to prospective students.

Reading "Wohnen," a German magazine, is a good way for Judy Schmell to test her working vocabulary.

Training candidates for the Junior Year Abroad program, providing means of communicating with foreign students, stimulating interest in other countries and cultures, and producing just plain effective speakers—these were some of the vital functions filled by the language department.

From the Old English of Chaucer to the modern tales of Kafka, from the Greek drama of Sophocles to the American short story, from the universality of Shakespeare to the specificity of Baldwin—the literature student received a diverse and well-rounded background in the literary arts.

This year the traditional freshman Basic Communications course was incorporated with the sophomore General Literature course to form one four-hour course entitled Composition and World Literature—a revision involving much faculty time.

Assistant Professor John Fisher returned in September from a sabbatical which he spent working on his doctorate at the University of Pennsylvania. Instructor Vernon Schertz also returned from a leave of absence spent in study at Indiana University.

In March Rudy Wiebe published his second novel. Printed by William Erdmans, the book, First and Vital Candle, has a Canadian setting.

As the GC student progressed from his first traumatic encounter with historian criticism or fledgling political comparison to the more concrete experience of upper-level history and political science experience he became increasingly aware of what man has been and what he can become.

Included in this process were the traditional panic-filled civ exams, enlightening discussion sections, and the chance to test scholarly expression with critical reviews on works by Bointon and Haskins. For upper-classmen there were stimulating lectures in a newly styled course in American Social History, the excitement of the unknown in History of the Far East and the continuing dichotomy between Machiavelli and more traditional political philosophy.

Literary efforts were not totally confined to the students. Professor John Oyer published his doctoral work, Lutheran Reformers Against Anabaptists, and Professors Leatherman and Schlabach made strides in their doctoral research, while Professor Smith continued his studies of William Jennings Bryan.

Teaching the concepts which merge and blend to create our social institutions, and the practical skills necessary to make the theory workable was the task of the social work and commerce sections of Division II.

As the student in Services to Individuals, Social Deviancy or Abnormal Psychology learned the technique of combating our many social ills, he gained a more sympathetic insight into problems stemming from an over-paced twentieth century. Strengthening the learning process were the experiences of the faculty which interacted with surrounding communities with reciprocal benefit. Professor Glick was active in the Family Service Agency, carrying a full case load; J. Howard Kauffman was an integral part of the Elkhart County Anti-Poverty Program.

The social interaction could also be evidenced in the more technical skills of an efficiently trained secretary or accountant, and the commerce department filled this role. John Hostetter joined the commerce faculty full-time while at the same time opening an office in Goshen as a Certified Public Accountant.

The science department was a stimulation for seeds of curiosity, a developed technique of carefully observed data, an experience in applying blackboard theories. It was a disciplined mind which made a logical and accurate analysis, a probing mind which dissected the mysteries of life, and a Playboy foldout which suddenly appeared on the second blackboard.

Glen Miller spent last summer in research on the synthesis of anti-cancer compounds, and Merle Jacobs had been doing research in physiological genetics. Returning this year were Henry Weaver who was at the University of San Marcos in Lima, Peru, and Jonathan Roth who was doing post-doctoral research at the University of Miami. Through lucid but lengthy explanations of unsolved problems, these profs and the others who made up the department sought to prepare their students for occupations dependent on a carefully digested and applicable knowledge of scientific information.

As the population of the world expanded the possibilities of tragedy due to ignorance and mismanagement became an increasing threat to the stability of our world. Both the Physical Education and Home Economic departments were doing their part to avert such tragedy by training efficient and creative teachers and homemakers. Whether experimenting with new food products, learning how to manage a budget, or introducing the values of the president's Program of Physical Fitness to area youngsters, the student learned and developed skills which were applicable to man's general betterment.

This widening range of concern could be noted in the activities of two of the faculty members in these departments. Miss Olive Wyse was a member of the American Home Economics Association accreditation committee, and Mr. Roman Gingerich returned after a year in Thailand as a Fulbright lecturer.

Anne Hershberger returned as a pediatrics instructor after teaching in the Indiana University School of Nursing. She has studied at the Wayne State University Graduate School, and during the summer of 1965, she served as camp nurse at the Children's International Summer Village held at Bloomington, Indiana.

Student Services

Feeling the college's expansion pains, the staff faced new responsibilities which resulted in staff enlargement and adjustment to new time saving equipment.

The duplication office moved to a more adequate room. Additional typists were hired to aid in the printing of Fine Arts tests, Student Government propaganda, statements of school policy, alumni newsletters, and registration forms.

The cafeteria, built for a 1951 enrollment, was no less affected by the student expansion. To handle the constant line, the staff installed a double line serving area during Christmas vacation.

Although the traditional five cent ice-cream cones and cokes were abolished, the snack shop met the demands of after LM splurges and 3:30 thirsts.

Greasing the SCA car, mowing the soccer field, planting petunias, cleaning the dirt-tracked halls of Westlawn, stuffing mail boxes. . . .

Deciphering professor's tests is sometimes more confusing to the typists than to the students.

SEMINARY

The seminary stands alone, yet exists within the framework of the larger church. Somewhat alienated from the college scheme, it operates as a unique community of students working to broaden their knowledge and appreciation of the Christian's calling and mission.

Unity is captured in fragmental fusing . . . prospective theologians and ministers . . . serenity of the chapel . . . the ping-pong table in the basement . . . the littered opinion board . . . assistant pastorships. The duplex of buildings, the variety of personalities, and the diversity of thought juxtapose to create a completeness.

Yet the seminary is more than a secluded community sufficient in itself. It relates to and also depends upon the college, the surrounding community and the entire church fellowship. College students frequent the seminary library when burdened with pangs of Protestant papers. Seminarians speak in local churches, write for Gospel Herald, and engage in theological dialogue with Jesuit priests, and all occurs with a focus on Christ.

Seminary Faculty

Graduate school professors were pressed to keep pace with the new books and many periodicals in their fields. To present the freshest possible slant to lectures, many faculty members spent the summer traveling. Professor Millard Lind spent six weeks in Palestine and Greece studying archeological sites and for two weeks helped excavate the fifty-foot thick city wall at Tell Gezer. Professor John Howard Yoder attended the fourth annual Prague Peace Conference in Prague, Czechoslovakia with a group of Seminary students. Dean Ross Bender visited Mennonite churches in South America and the Mennonite Seminary at Montevideo, Uruguay. Professor Paul Miller was a guest at Aspen, Colorado's Institute of Humanistic Studies where he recorded the dialogue between humanists from business, government and church.

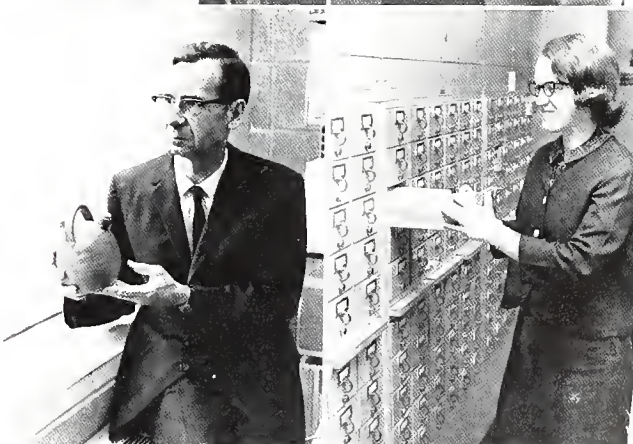

Professor J. C. Wenger returned from sabbatical leave and study at Princeton Seminary to present the Conrad Grebel Lectures on the authority of Scripture. New members of the faculty were Professor Weyburn Graff, a former teacher at Union Biblical Seminary, Yeatmal, India, who served as Associate Professor of Christian Education, and S. David Garber, a recent graduate of Princeton Seminary, who acted as Assistant Professor of New Testament.

A Time to Fellowship

A carefully prepared buffet table interests middler Clean Nyce and Dr. J. C. Wenger at an afternoon Seminary Fellowship meeting.

Chapel messages by guest speakers take on new depth as seminarians explore the issues raised.

The rhythm in the seminarian's life came from a mixture of formal and informal groupings. Daily chapel, weekly Seminary Fellowship meetings, and Tuesday small group meetings sharpened current concerns and ideas in the theological world, the Anabaptist tradition, and the church's witness to society.

Guest speakers also contributed significantly to the year's study. Dr. John A. Hastetter of Temple University lectured on Amish and Hutterite confrontations with culture and Dr. Erik Rautley of Edinburgh, Scotland lectured on church music. Another special speaker was Dr. K. C. Matthew, Dean of Union Biblical Seminary, Yeatmal, India.

The favorite seminary sport was discussing theologians. Twice weekly bus rides to Elkhart provided the forum for wide ranging discussions on "God is dead theology", The Secular City, Billy Graham and the latest Vietnam disaster. Likewise the noon-meal at Elkhart, always a treat in itself, was a roundtable for theological conversation and football guessing with fellow seminarians from Mennonite Biblical Seminary. Thursday evening basketball and frequent ping-pong matches stimulated and relaxed students with their keen competition.

For junior seminary students, such as Jerry Massonari, an in-depth study of the New Testament involves extensive outside reading.

Seminary Seniors

Over half the students in seminary were studying for the pastorate. The rest were preparing for church related vocations or simply studying to equip themselves theologically for the challenge of contemporary society in their particular specialty. As a doctor, teacher or missionary, seminary students discovered the heritage of their faith and the great theological minds of the present day.

A thorough study of the documents of the Christian faith involved the student's study. Supplementary texts from Barth, Brunner, Cullmann, Bright and Banhaeffer were examined and tested against the Christological norm. The student's struggle for an adequate theology of his own was a daily quest. Yet the question of arriving at a correct faith was always seen in the light of a Biblical faith.

Commanding particular attention this year was the question of pacifism, especially the United States' involvement in Vietnam. In November seven students traveled to Aurora, Illinois for a debate with Jesuit seminary students on pacifism. Many students and professors also supported the newspaper statement of the Elkhart County Committee of Christian Conscience Concerning Vietnam.

PERSONALITY

The individual is camouflaged by the ease with which he blends into the uniformity of campus life. The regularity of classes. The homogenous family names. The empty mailbox. Yet, a closer look reveals his own uniqueness . . . a uniqueness with which he interacts in the college and the world community.

In committee meetings, chorus tours, and Koinonia groups, the participant individualizes collectively. Through blending, his own special self emerges. Over a stack of neatly disorganized Record articles, empty coffee cups at four A.M., or an all night lab session, a realness emerges. The gently discordant strumming of a friend's guitar, a mutually spontaneous smile, or a study date act as evidence of a more personal evolution.

Personality synthesis can take place in an empty chair or an unspoken word. The choice between involvement and aloneness results in an individual . . . another individual identifiable with Goshen College.

Senior Class Officers: Karl Massanari, Advisor; Jon Hartzler, Treasurer; Sarah Rath, Vice-President; Gerald Sieber, President; Janice Kauffman, Secretary; Eleanor Steiner, Historian.

Senior. Ready to go beyond. Anticipation. On top of the pile. Feared by freshmen, respected by sophomores, envied by juniors. Practice teacher. Generally catered to. Wedding plans. Doesn't need to rely upon "niceness" and appearance.

Sensitive to current affairs, national and international problems. History and sociology seminars. Independent study. Preoccupation with intellectual pursuits. Still faces the never ending treadmill of dead lines.

Realizes the seriousness of life. Formulates opinions and seeks answers. Anxious to put knowledge and theories to work. Stands alone ready to face the world. Soon to be a mere freshman again.

Junior Class Officers: Lester Glick, Advisor; Delass Schertz, Treasurer; Nancy Kennell, Secretary; Bruce Stahly, President; Rodney Groff, Vice-President; Gwen Brenneman, Senator; Ruth Zarria, Historian.

Junior. Adjusted and self-confident. The emergence of the individual.

Leaves the herd to join a small group. Accepts responsibilities—committee meetings. Organizes the Maple Leaf. Interviews for the Record. Stars in "The Importance of Being Earnest." Bull sessions and cow conferences. Parties at the college cabin. Friendships well established. Identity well established.

Realizes the potential of knowledge. Important decisions—specialization. Field narrows and tension mounts. Studies abroad. Subtle knowingness. Analyzes own beliefs and reacts to beliefs of others.

Vague restlessness. Fights way through doubts. Wants to discover and think for himself. Mocks stereotyping and classification. Individualized thought and action.

Junior Year Abroad

Junior religion major, Kathy Yoder, apparently remains uninfluenced by Sartre.

Sophomore Class Officers: Leo Leider, Senator; Kathy Rensberger, Treasurer; Linda D. King, Secretary; Leon Weaver, President; Lynn Smith, Vice-President; Norman Krous, Advisor; Al Albrecht, Advisor.

Sophomore. Wise and foolish. Knows everything and knows nothing.

Out of Kulp and Coffman. Riotous variety show and traditional parties. Nights out with the gang, a couple of buddies, HIM, or HER. Nights in with HOMER. Furious Frenzy. Carefree, irresponsible—too much fun.

More studying and more studying—more than last year EVEN. Sophomore tests—agony and MORE agony. Field trips to Chicago. Soap carvings and OT papers. The thrill of learning to know profs as people and friends. The excitement of taking on upper level history course. The wonder of discovery—EUREKA.

Older, but not old enough—frustration. Choices, decisions, a major—social work or English? Search for identity—who am I? Beginning to be not a nobody—campus responsibilities. Tensions—but creative tensions. Search for meaning—to be.

Freshman. New and impressionable. Only superiority is numerical.

Conventional "niceness." Smiles at upper-classmen. Learns to drink coffee. Follows the latest hem and hair lines. Invades the snack shop. Flocks to meals when the line's the longest. No idiosyncrosies or personalities—all alike.

Academic tenderfoot. Scribbled down notes. The horror of that first civ test. Tennis in Phys. Ed. The Odyssey and Plato. Pure, unadulterated misunderstandings.

Recovering from the first rude shock of college life. Being on his own—ecstacy. Adjusting to new situations—apprehension. Basically ignored but striving for recognition and acceptance. Exciting confusion. Searching and re-examining. Opening new doors.

COMMUNITY

In a past, present, and future dialogue, Goshen College continually involves its existence in the larger community.

Categorized by an emblematic sweatshirt, a growing sense of responsibility, and an ever lean and hungry look, the students may be found writing letters to the Goshen News, tutoring elementary school children, discovering that "neat place to eat," and supplementing research at Goshen, Elkhart, and Notre Dame libraries. Community churches feel the influence of the overflow of students, and students sense the welcome so freely given.

The resulting dialogue can be seen in a continuing student community interaction. Community leaders assist the President's Advisory Board and fund raising projects. Merchants provide part-time jobs for students, and in turn become students at Tuesday evening courses. GC students monopolize Azars after an LM, while the community dominates A section at the program. Hence a persisting community—student exchange for the betterment of all involved.

Each year the ever increasing abundance of America gives us greater reasons for gratitude. We are grateful for the excellent contributions Goshen College is making as it seeks to educate each student in such a way that he might be able to fulfill the purpose for which he was created.

Interaction and the creation of a fuller personhood are the inevitable components of student life. It is here that students of different ideas, abilities, and textures, confront one another and share experiences. Their task is to understand and appreciate the other for what he is, and simultaneously learn from him. These inter-personal relations teach him responsibility. It is from this context that the student goes forth better equipped to fulfill the Goshen College motto —Culture for Service.

"With this on the Westlawn Hall floors we would have everything Kratz Hall has," explains Pat Smucker to Judy Schmell.
